

Abstract

The present invention is directed to methods of treating mucosal inflammation associated with rhinitis or sinusitis by administering peptidases that recognize and cleave polypeptides at Xaa-Pro sequences. In addition, the invention encompasses therapeutic packages in which pharmaceutical compositions containing the peptidases are preloaded in a device suitable for intranasally delivering drug.